

ISLANDS

is a performance and an installation in one, where choreographed events take place. Dance, music, sculpture and bodies fill the space, consisting of different islands, all created by professional artists.

Audience: children age 3 to 6 years old, plus family and people all ages with learning disabilities. Maximum 50 people in the audience. Participating: 4 artists on stage.

Ingrid Olterman Choreographer, Sten Sandell, Composer, Camilla Ed Scenography, Amanda Norlander Producer, Christian Farther Light technician, Pianist, Jon Fält Percussions, Lova Eriksson Dance, Song.

Islands could be described as a experimental installation, consisting of Islands in dialog with one another and the audience is invited to take part in different meetings. All participants are part of creating units in space. The meetings take place in the space between the audience and between artists. There is always time to explore and store information. Together with a percussionist, pianist and dancers the audience can touch, move, see and feel. The performance builds up from exploration of our senses and experiences of the elements – wood, metal, air and water. The performance is divided into a number of acts and the audience are divided into smaller groups moving from one island to another. In smaller groups the intimate meeting and exploration of compositions and choreographies is encouraged. Using live music the composer creates a unique environment. ISLANDS is stimulating for both child and adult.

"An inspiring room for play, at the same time a place to reflect. In the act of play, creation and exploration we interact and become part of the performance. Big and small eyes, active hands, open mouths and small steps meet. Each participant, can in their own pace, hear, see and feel through the performance, which consists of different spaces, Islands."
